ABSTRACT

1. (S/D) This report discusses the People's Liberation Army (PLA)'s main ground force units in the Guangzhou Military Region (GMR) in China. The functions and locations of these units were identified primarily from satellite imagery.

2. (U) This report updates a previous NPIC report, [redacted] dated July 1978 and includes five location maps, three annotated photographs, and five tables listing the main force units by unit subordination.

INTRODUCTION

3. (S/D) Subordinate to the GMR Headquarters (Figures 1 and 2 and Table 1) are three confirmed and one probable armies (Figures 3 through 6 and Tables 2 through 5) and 17 independent units (Figure 2 and Table 1). The independent units include an artillery division, an antiaircraft artillery (AAA) division headquarters, a signal regiment, at least three probable infantry divisions, an engineer regiment, a ponton bridge regiment, seven motor transport regiments, a probable airborne/reconnaissance unit, and a probable military region training unit.

4. (U) The numbered unit designators used in this report were primarily acquired from referenced document 1. This report updates a previous NPIC report.<sup>2</sup>

PLA GROUND FORCES, GUANGZHOU
MILITARY REGION, CHINA (S)

China/Vietnam Border Activity

5. (S/D) The Chinese incursion into Vietnam during early 1979 has been discussed in detail in various publications and, therefore, will not be discussed in this report. However, in the tables in this report on the 41st, 42d, and 55th armies, an entry has been made indicating those units which were out of garrison during the Chinese incursion. Since the Chinese withdrawal from Vietnam, at least three independent, probable infantry divisions have been observed near the China/Vietnam border in the GMR. These divisions are in the Chongzuo/Ningming, Qinzhou/Fangcheng, and Jingxi/Nanpo areas.

Probable Army on Hainan Island

6. (S/D) Major elements of a probable army have been identified on Hainan Island since 1975 (Figure 6 and Table 5). A possible headquarters, army-level artillery, AAA, and tank regiments, and two infantry divisions have been identified. Also, in the Yulin area, a barracks has recently been upgraded to house an infantry division-level artillery regiment. During 1978, 12 vehicle/equipment storage buildings and a miniature artillery firing range were constructed. This is the only evidence identified so far of a third division on Hainan Island.

Armor

7. (S/D) Two new tank regiments have been identified in the GMR since July 1978. One is near Zhangji in the 55th Army area (Figure 7) and the other is on Hainan Island. At Zhangji, up to 93 tanks have been observed. Construction of seven of nine probable tank storage buildings has been completed. The tank regiment on Hainan Island was garrisoned at two barracks—the first barracks is capable of housing one tank battalion, and the second barracks is capable of housing two tank battalions. One confirmed and 27 probable tanks were observed in the first barracks on [redacted] only up to six tanks have been observed at the second. Generally, only a total of three to five tanks are observed at these two barracks.

Artillery

8. (S/D) Artillery units were observed with the three independent probable infantry divisions that have appeared near the China/Vietnam border. In the Qinzhou/Fangcheng division area, elements of an artillery regiment were observed, and a barracks was under construction to house at least a battalion-sized artillery unit (Figure 8). In the Chongzuo/Ningming division area, major elements of an artillery regiment were observed (Figures 9 and 10). Facilities observed under construction nearby may possibly be intended for this regiment. Elements of an artillery battalion were observed in the Jingxi/Nanpo division area; however, no construction has been observed that can be associated with this unit.

Antiaircraft Artillery

9. (S/D) The annual AAA exercise was held at Beipo during the last quarter of 1979. It was the largest exercise observed here to date. At least 76 AAA batteries, containing 568 AA guns supported by over 900 trucks and 1,000 tents, were observed on imagery of [redacted]. The number of guns observed suggests that units other than main force units were involved. In fact, most of the GMR AAA units were out of garrison during the timeframe of the exercise. However, the AAA regiment subordinate to the 41st Army remained in garrison during the period of the exercise.
